JOURNALISTIC.

Perhaps it is not in bad taste to call attention to one fact in reference to the conduct of the EPITAPH, since its change of management, that may be considered as redounding to its credit. It has not catered to any morbid excitement, or kept inces santly before the people and the outside world past sensational occurren ces, the happening of which worked great injury to the welfare of this community in retarding the development of the resources of this county. It has endeavored to relate only facts, and to draw no conclusions not warranted by existing circumstances. Cochise county is but in its infancy in point of development, and its resources need only fostering care and cultivation to produce a giant made up of wealth and prosperity. It is second to no section of country in mmeral capabilities, and has prodired more bullion than any other portion of Arizons. An immense num her of undeveloped mines only need capital to become productive of fabulous wealth. The present policy of the EPITAPH is to so treat of current events that such capital may not be kept away, by a misunderstanding on the part of investors of the true condition of things. Nothing shall be concealed, and nothing set down in malice or through love of sensational fiction. In other words, we propose to let Cochise county work out her destiny unimpeded by falsehood and unchecked by misrepresentation. Past local troubles are dead and buried, and will never be resurrected by the EPITAPH. The success of a journal depends upon the growth of the country wherein it is located, and any policy not founded upon a determination to aid such growth can only be suicidal.

By the account published in the local columns of this number of the EPITAPH, the mystery connected with the Grand Jury report of the recorder's office thickens. It seems that two reports are missing; that upon the conduct of the office of the clerk of the district court, in addition to the one bearing upon the recorder. These two reports, taking the account to be correct, were written upon opposite sides of the same half-sheet of paper. One was favorable to the secorder; the other condemnatory of the clerk's office. It is also asserted that the sub-committee that examined both the above offices had an understanding with L. W. Carr, the foreman of the jury that the general report of that body would recommend the discharge of the clerk of the court. The high Misiness and social standing of Mr. Carr precludes any thought that there could have been any design upon his part in not rendering to the public the exact findings of the grand jury. He has, however, one clear duty to perform. The reports of the sub-committee should be placed upon record, where they properly belong, and not remain in the private custody of the ex-foreman.

PROF. I. E. JAMES, who has held the superintendency of the Contention mine during the absence of Mr. Silas White, takes his departure today for the eastern states, where he will remain a month. Prof. James is widely known on the Pacific coast, as a mining man and a scientist. He has arbitrated alone, numerous mining disputes, involving hundreds of thousands of dollars, and has never made a mistake. His judgment is always born of thought, and his honesty is as impartial as sunshine. He is true to his friends, but just to all. With a heart as gentle as a woman's, his manhood is without flaw. The writer of these lines has known him so long and well, that he has a right to wish him God speed on his journey, and express a hope that he may find the "loved ones at home" in good health and happiness.

THE New York Mail and Express, notices the arrival of Col. Forsythe, "the great Indian fighter," in that city; and gives an account of that warrior's "terrible" conflict with Juh's band. As Col. Forsythe was always a day behind the Indians, and Capt. Tupper did all the fighting, the former's heroism must lie principally on paper. It certainly is most unjust that the laurels belonging to a brave and modest officer should be appropriated by one who has not the courage to resist the effect upon his vanity, of cheap and fictitious no-
